In recent decades, the United States has made substantial progress in improving the overall health of the nation, yet racial and ethnic disparities in health and health care persist. The 2013 RWJF Center for Health Policy Health Disparities Summit is premised on the understanding that persistent health disparities in the United States are both unacceptable and correctable. Furthermore, comprehensive and coordinated policy action is needed to address the unequal distribution of social, educational, and economic resources that underlie preventable differences in health outcomes among population groups. This conference, "Practices and Policies That Promote Health Justice" will provide an opportunity for students, community members, health policy experts, researchers, and policy makers to examine and discuss the crosscurrents, complexities, causes, and remedies of health disparities.

To support this mission, we have issued an open invitation to members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, the Congressional Black Caucus, The Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, The Congressional Native American Caucus and the Congressional Mental Health Caucus as well as to select Members who are active in health policy issues. The Members of these Caucuses were invited because they have a vested interest in promoting policies that redress racial and ethnic health inequities, the focal point of the conference. The research, programs, and policies that will be discussed during the conference will provide Members of Congress and Congressional staff with an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the latest research and evidence on the status of health disparities in the United States. In doing so, this conference relates directly to the official duties of a Member of Congress or congressional staff as the U.S. Congress is responsible for legislating federal health policy. Members of Congress would be expected to attend all of the conference proceedings and events, and would be invited to offer remarks on federal health policy initiatives during one or more of the conference panels or during the conference proceedings. While it is possible that other Members of Congress may have been forwarded the invitation by one of their peers, we can confirm that the following offices have received an invitation:

PRIMARY TRIP SPONSOR FORM

12. For each sponsor required to submit a sponsor form, describe the sponsor's interest in the subject matter of the trip and its role in organizing and/or conducting the trip:

The following sponsors have supported the conference for the following reasons:

1. Con Alma Foundation
   The Con Alma Health Foundation is organized to be aware of, and respond to, the health rights and needs of the culturally and demographically diverse peoples and communities of New Mexico. Con Alma seeks to improve the health status and access to health care services for all New Mexicans and advocates for health policy that addresses the health needs of all New Mexicans.

2. New Mexico Medical Society
   NMMS is the professional organization for medical and osteopathic doctors in New Mexico. 3. New Mexico Hospital Association
   NMHA, a voluntary membership organization, represents its membership on legislative, regulatory and public policy issues. NMHA works with its members and others to improve the health status of the citizens of New Mexico. NMHA’s strategic initiatives include: developing and advocating for solutions to New Mexico’s uninsured problem, working collaboratively with others to address New Mexico health care workforce issues, and enhancing public trust in New Mexico’s hospitals and health systems by promoting a culture of patient safety and promoting transparency.

The mission of the conference is to promote overall health and the eliminate health disparities in the United States. 4. Provide names and titles of ALL House Members and employees you are inviting. For each House invitee, provide an explanation of why the individual was invited (include additional pages if necessary)

In recent decades, the United States has made substantial progress in improving the overall health of the nation, yet racial and ethnic disparities in health and health care persist. The 2013 RWJF Center for Health Policy Health Disparities Summit is premised on the understanding that persistent health disparities in the United States are both unacceptable and correctable. Furthermore, comprehensive and coordinated policy action is needed to address the unequal distribution of social, educational, and economic resources that underlie preventable differences in health outcomes among population groups. This conference, “Practices and Policies That Promote Health Justice” will provide an opportunity for students, community members, health policy experts, researchers, and policy makers to examine and discuss the crosscurrents, complexities, causes, and remedies of health disparities.

To support this mission, we have issued an open invitation to members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, the Congressional Black Caucus, The Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, The Congressional Native American Caucus and the Congressional Mental Health Caucus as well as to select Members who are active in health policy issues. The Members of these Caucuses were invited because they have a vested interest in promoting policies that redress racial and ethnic health inequities, the focal point of the conference. We have stipulated that congressional staff may attend if health disparities is a part of their legislative portfolio, (either legislative aide, legislative assistant, legislative director, or chief of staff, so long as healthcare, health policy, and/or social justice issues are the responsibility of the staffer). Congressional staff must accompany their boss (Member) in an official capacity. No staff assistants or interns may attend. Congressional staff may attend the conference without accompanying their boss (Member) only if they hold appropriate seniority to officially represent their boss at the conference.

The research, programs, and policies that will be discussed during the conference will provide Members of Congress and Congressional staff with an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the latest research and evidence on the status of health disparities in the United States. In doing so, this conference relates directly to the official duties of a Member of Congress or congressional staff as the U.S. Congress is responsible for legislating federal health policy. Members of Congress and/or their staff, would be expected to attend all of the conference proceedings and events, and would be invited to offer remarks on federal health policy initiatives during one or more of the conference panels or during the conference proceedings. While it is possible that other Members of Congress may have been forwarded the invitation by one of their peers, we can confirm that the following offices have received an invitation:
