This format is important to enable full participation.

Roundtable Discussion

AN OVERVIEW OF GLOBAL RIVALRY

As peer or near-peer competitors, China and the U.S. are striving to shape security architectures, trading regimes, norms and practices, and values systems worldwide. Few of the issues they face are merely bilateral. The measure of the relationship will be taken not only in Beijing and Washington, but in Africa, the Arctic, the Antarctic, Southeast Asia, outer space, and cyberspace.

- Do the U.S. and China understand the terms and costs of their unprecedented global rivalry?
- What assets and liabilities does each nation bring to the competition?
- How are the superpowers' global ambitions related to their domestic politics?
- Which global perceptions and attitudes shape Sino-U.S. competition?

The Asia Society*

Break

11:00 AM – 12:45 PM
Roundtable Discussion

FROM ENGAGEMENT TO ADVERSITY: BILATERAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT, AND CHINA'S BELT AND ROAD INITIATIVE

After 40 years of engagement in which economics served, in China's President Xi Jinping's phrase, as the "ballast" of the relationship, American dissatisfaction with China's trade and investment policies became the fuse that ignited a comprehensive competition. China is unwilling to restructure its economy to meet American demands, however, and it is learning to leverage its wealth to build influence worldwide and within the U.S.

- Which of China's trade and investment policies pose the greatest threat to the U.S., and what are the chances of altering them?
- Is the Belt & Road Initiative, China's global expansion plan, simply a program for "predatory lending," or is China providing global public goods and rewriting rules that may be accepted?
- Should the U.S. view China's economy as developing and reforming, or as a static, mercantilist menace?
- To what degree does each country's development depend on economic engagement with the other?

*Daniel Rosen, Founding Partner,
The Rhodium Group*

12:45 PM – 1:30 PM
Working Lunch

Discussion continues between members of Congress and scholars on the challenges for U.S. policy regarding China.

1:30 PM – 3:30 PM

EMERGING THEATERS OF COMPETITION:

Roundtable Discussion

CYBERSPACE AND ESPIONAGE, WEAPONIZATION OF SPACE, AND THE RACE TO DOMINATE ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE

Beijing and Washington agree that innovation is now the key to economic, military, and soft power. A key feature of their competition is the race to master and marketize emergent technologies, and Artificial Intelligence in particular, which has the capacity to accelerate and integrate other innovations. If one side gains a clear advantage in AI, the other may never catch up.

- Is China still an imitative nation, or has it developed the ability to innovate at the American scale?
- Is the American regulatory environment a spur to AI innovation, or a drag on the growth of this emerging industry?
- Which nation will likely prevail in the AI competition, and what are the global implications of dominance?

*Dean Cheng, Senior Research Fellow,
Asia Studies Center, the Heritage Foundation*

3:30 PM – 6:00 PM
Individual Discussions

Members of Congress and scholars meet individually to discuss U.S. policy toward China. Scholars available to meet for in-depth discussion of ideas raised in previous sessions that day include Robert Daly, Daniel Rosen, and Dean Cheng.

A CHINESE PERSPECTIVE ON U.S.-CHINA RELATIONS
China sees its exponential development over the last few decades as a restoration of its destiny as a major power. China's relationship with the U.S. has been a significant factor in its dramatic growth. What is China's perspective on the U.S.-China relationship?

Yun Sun, Director, China Program, The Stimson Center

Roundtable Discussion

UNDERSTANDING CHINA'S QUEST FOR POWER ON CHINA'S TERMS

Under Xi Jinping, the Chinese Communist Party has aggressively used clout to fulfill an ambition to rise its stature on the global stage irrespective of its competition with the U.S. Xi's rejuvenation of a strong Chinese global presence has implications for issues of sovereignty, political, security and economic concerns as well as changing global rules in the realms of human rights and governance of internet space. China's attempt to shape global narratives and to influence investment serve its historic aspirations.

- What are the primary methods by which Beijing influences American institutions?
- What specific harms have resulted from Chinese influence operations? How widespread are they?
- What is the relationship between China's influence campaigns and its public diplomacy, espionage, and interference operations?
- How do China's actions differentiate from legitimate "soft power" activities?

*Elizabeth Economy, Director for Asia,
Council on Foreign Relations*

11:00 AM – 12:45 PM
Roundtable Discussion

STANDOFF OR STATUS QUO IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC?

It appears that China has succeeded in establishing a "new normal" in the Western Pacific; its constant patrols near the Senkaku Islands are barely mentioned by Western media and, in the South China Sea, it has militarized artificial islands and flouted the findings of the Permanent Court of Arbitration with impunity. American Freedom of Navigation operations have not altered Chinese behavior or ambitions.

- Does the "Indo-Pacific" strategy offer realistic hope of countering China's growing power in the region?
- What are the implications of China's growing power in the Western Pacific for U.S. alliances with Japan and South Korea, Thailand and the Philippines?
- How do Southeast Asian nations view the relative power of the U.S. and China in the region?
- How is China's more assertive stance toward Taiwan related to its policies in the Western Pacific?

Center for Strategic & International Studies*

Roundtable Discussion

TOWARD AN EFFECTIVE STRATEGY: POLICY IMPLICATIONS FOR THE U.S.

The U.S. has informed China of its grievances and offered a stark declaration of its attitude toward the People's Republic of China: We are rivals. Washington has not yet articulated policies to deal with the China threat, however, much less has it integrated its policies in light of American capabilities, constraints, and national will. In sum, the U.S. does not have a strategy for managing its greatest security challenge.

- What are America's primary interests vis-à-vis China?
- What costs are the U.S. government and the American people willing to bear over the long run in competition with China?
- What does the U.S. envision as the stable end point of the China rivalry?
- What specific policies can best address American interests?

Robert Daly, Director, The Kissinger Institute, The Wilson Center
