Question # 4

CERAWeek brings together global leaders to advance new ideas, insight and solutions to the biggest challenges facing the future of energy, the environment, and climate. CERAWeek is widely considered to be the most prestigious annual gathering of CEOs and Ministers from global energy and utilities, as well as automotive, manufacturing, policy and financial communities, along with a growing presence of tech. We invited these specific Members of Congress to discuss pragmatic opportunities for collaboration on how technology and the reprioritization of energy sources will impact our future. Their work on these topics will allow for engagement with representatives from the major companies, trade associations, and NGOs attending CERAWeek. Members will have the opportunity to also discuss how legislation, such as permitting reform, impacts the advancement of the energy transition with the people directly making decisions.

1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

Members will attend CERAWeek’s opening plenary sessions. The purpose of attending CERAWeek is to build off of discussions and perspectives shared during COP28 in Dubai and in the subsequent months that address energy transitions. The drive for energy transition is reshaping the competitive landscape for companies and countries – creating new opportunities and risks across the energy value chain. The imperative to reduce emissions has grown in urgency. Yet expectations of a simple linear global transition have been shaken as climate goals compete with concerns over how to deliver economic growth while ensuring energy security, energy access, and affordability. The multidimensional energy transition reflects different realities and timelines by region, technology, industry strategies, the variety of social and political approaches and divergent national priorities in an increasingly multipolar world. Opening plenaries will offer diverse perspectives from global government and energy leaders on the energy transition and what that means for climate change.

CSF’s mission is to bring together ideologically diverse Members of Congress and their staff, global leaders, and corporate and trade executives to discuss climate science, economics, and policy. By bringing Members of Congress to CERAWeek, CSF is working towards its mission of being a trusted space for dialogue that advances the agenda on climate.

- 12:00 PM – 1:00 PM CDT Lunch Discussion on Energy Transition with Oil & Gas Industry Executives
1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

Members will be joined over lunch by oil and gas industry executives. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the oil and gas industry’s takeaways from COP28 and how, if at all, COP impacted their climate goals. At CERAWeek, these companies will be leading discussions on their strategies and investments. This lunch will provide an opportunity for Members to dive deeper into what the multidimensional energy transition will look like.

Monday, March 18, 2024

1:15 PM – 2:00 PM CDT Meeting with Energy Infrastructure Executives
1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

Members will be joined by energy infrastructure executives to discuss changes in physical energy production infrastructure to meet energy transition goals. These companies build critical energy infrastructure that powers the world: wind turbines, defense and space systems, advanced class gas turbines, AI systems, and more. Their technology helps customers reduce carbon emissions. This conversation will provide a crucial background on how investments in improved energy infrastructure determine carbon outcomes.

2:15 PM – 3:00 PM CDT Meeting with Hydrogen Energy Industry Executives
1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

Members will be joined by renewable energy executives to discuss how different types of hydrogen are being used in the multidimensional energy transition. Clean hydrogen produced with renewable or nuclear energy, or fossil fuels using carbon capture, can help to decarbonize a range of sectors, including long-haul transport, chemicals, and iron and steel, where it has proven difficult to reduce emissions. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss advancements in hydrogen technology and the feasibility of increasing production on a broader scale.

3:15 PM – 4:00 PM CDT Discussion on National Security and the Energy Industry
1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

One of the key questions at CERAWeek is on policy and geopolitics—how will growing global tensions and conflicts reshape the international order? Members will be joined by domestic and international security experts to discuss national security and the energy industry, how current world events are shaping energy policy, and how this may impact energy transition goals.

4:30 PM – 6:00 PM CDT Attend CERAWeek Day 1 Closing Plenaries
1001 Avenida De Las Americas, Houston

Members will attend Day 1 closing plenaries at CERAWeek. These discussions will feature energy industry executives, scientists, and government officials in conversation on decarbonization pathways, US energy policy in an election year, the power of AI in climate solutions, decarbonizing hard-to-abate sectors, and carbon pricing in a hydrogen market.
