 - Representative August Pfluger (R-TX)
Representative Pfluger is a member of the Conservative Climate Caucus and the Congressional Sportsmen's Caucus.
12. The International Conservation Caucus Foundation (ICCF) educates U.S. policymakers and other global political and business leaders on the vital links between good natural resource management, sustainable economic development, conflict avoidance, and regional security. ICCF organized the logistics of lodging and travel for the trip and identified topics and expert speakers.
- Natural Selection is a conservation-driven tourism company, which owns and operates the camps visited on the trip. They look to make a difference by reinvesting into conservation and partnering with local communities, governments, and conservation organizations in the areas they operate to help protect important conservation areas and create long-term benefits. Natural Selection offers reduced lodging rates to ICCF as a conservation organization working in the region. Given the company's expertise in sustainable tourism and wildlife conservation, Natural Selection's founders were also invited to brief the delegation.
13. This mission visits sites in remote locations which are not easily accessible by car or commercial flight. Flight charter and helicopter transportation provide safe and timely travel between these sites as ground transportation is fairly unreliable/unpredictable. Ground or fixed wing air transportation would take significantly more time than helicopter transportation between Khwai and Moremi reserves, and helicopter transfer further provides capabilities to conduct en route briefing.
- 15(b) The purpose of this mission is to familiarize and educate the delegation about the critical role that conservation and sound natural resource management play in poverty alleviation, sustainable economic development, and regional security for Botswana, neighboring states within the Kavango-Zambezi Transfrontier Conservation Area (KAZA TFCA), and other developing countries of the world and subsequent impacts on the U.S. The Okavango watershed region stretches across southern Africa. Botswana contains the Okavango Delta, a UNESCO heritage site and pristine expanse, home to thousands of species, including the world's largest elephant population. Sites visited fall within the KAZA TFCA on community-owned reserves, which make them ideal to demonstrate the importance of the Delta ecosystem, showcase models of sustainable tourism and community conservation, and highlight the impacts of human-wildlife conflict and wildlife poaching.

Rates at Tuludi Camp and Tawana Camp are inclusive of lodging, meals, and vehicle and guide costs. Rates at the Taj Cape Town are inclusive of dinner and breakfast.

- 18. The cost of lodging reflects the full amount of inclusive rates offered at each location as outlined above. These rates are exclusive of conservation fees and tips.

Dear Colleague:

Pursuant to House Rule 25, clause 5(d)(2), the Committee on Ethics hereby approves your and your parent's proposed trip to Botswana,¹ scheduled for April 20 to 27, 2024, sponsored by International Conservation Caucus Foundation and Natural Selection.

You must complete a Member/Officer Post-Travel Disclosure Form and file it, together with a Sponsor Post-Travel Disclosure Form completed by the trip sponsor, with the Clerk of the House within 15 days after your return from travel. As part of that filing, you are also required to attach a copy of this letter and both the Traveler and Primary Trip Sponsor Forms (including attachments) you previously submitted to the Committee in seeking pre-approval for this trip. You must also report all travel expenses totaling more than $480 from a single source on the "Travel" schedule of your annual Financial Disclosure Statement covering this calendar year. Finally, Travel Regulation § 404(d) also requires you to keep a copy of all request forms and supporting information provided to the Committee for three subsequent Congresses from the date of travel.

Because the trip may involve meetings with foreign government representatives, we note that House Members may accept, under the Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act (FGDA), gifts "of minimal value [currently $480] tendered as a souvenir or mark of courtesy" by a foreign government. Any tangible gifts valued in excess of minimal value received from a foreign government must, within 60 days of acceptance, be disclosed on a Form for Disclosing Gifts from Foreign Governments and either turned over to the Clerk of the House, or, with the written approval of the Committee, retained for official use.

¹ Please be aware that the Committee's review of the proposed trip does not extend to either the security situation in the destination country or security related to foreign travel in general. We recommend you contact the Office of House Security (OHS) for a safety and security briefing prior to your departure. OHS may be reached at (202) 226-2044 or ohsstaff@mail.house.gov. House travelers should also register for the U.S. State Department's Smart Traveler Enrollment Program at <https://step.state.gov>.

an overview of ICCF.*

Accommodations: Taj Cape Town

Tuesday, April 23rd

- 07:00 - 08:00 Breakfast briefing on comparative conservation and development
- The delegation will discuss how countries in Africa comparatively approach conservation and development at national, regional, and international levels, as well as how the US and other developed states have historically approached conservation and development on the continent.*
- 08:00 - 09:00 Check out and transfer to airport
- 10:35 - 13:10 Flight from Cape Town to Maun
- 14:00 - 15:00 Mack Air flight to Khwai Private Reserve
- 15:00 - 16:00 Transfer to Tuludi Camp, briefing en route to introduce the delegation to the Okavango ecosystem
- The Okavango River Basin is Africa's most expansive inland water system and home to its largest remaining elephant populations. It begins in the Angolan highlands and runs through Namibia before entering Botswana and developing into the Okavango Delta, over 1,000 miles from its headwaters. The Okavango River and Delta are an incredible example of the complicated and intricate flood pulse water cycle that supports ecological and social systems in this region including over one million Botswanans, Namibians, and Angolans.*
- The unusual aspect of the Okavango is that it receives its water in Botswana's dry season. Only after summer rainfall has ceased do the floodwaters arrive in the Delta from further north, creating a fertile oasis crammed with life. It can take six months for the waters to filter down from the Panhandle in the north to the outer limits of the Delta. The level of each year's inundation is primarily dependent on rainfall in the catchment areas in Angola as well as over the Delta itself, and there is a distinct short- and long-term cycle to the flooding patterns of the Okavango and associated river systems.*
- 16:00 - 16:30 Check-in
- 16:30 - 17:30 Tea briefing on Botswana's approach to sustainable ecotourism
- With support from local Reserve staff, this briefing will discuss the importance of a community-driven conservation economy and sustainable tourism in the Okavango River Basin. It will talk about strengthening the resilience of the local communities who live in harmony with nature, so that conservation of biodiversity can be achieved – as well as the significance of empowering communities with a steady source of income through employment in community-based alternative livelihoods to curb the* dependence on wildlife and to make a living. This briefing will illustrate the unique operating environment for tourism in Botswana, including the regulatory and training requirements for guides and rangers. It will also highlight the need for cooperation among tourism companies to work toward benefiting local communities and conservation.

17:30 - 19:00

Field visit and breakfast briefing on sustainable management of wildlife populations

ICCF staff will lead a discussion on different tools available to sustainably manage wildlife populations. There are many examples where Africa's biodiversity is being effectively conserved through well-managed parks and protected areas, and sustainable landscapes that support nature, human well-being, and Africa's economies. Botswana has a unique challenge with an overcrowding of elephants, which requires opening of migration routes across international borders and other tools to address. In neighboring southeast Angola, which contains the headwaters of the Okavango Delta, wildlife populations have been decimated as a result of prolonged Civil War, but efforts to improve park management offer an opportunity to restore wildlife populations.

Khwai Private Reserve is a pristine 440,000 acre unfenced private reserve that borders both the Moremi Game Reserve and Chobe National Park in northern Botswana. The reserve has a number of vastly different habitats that are essential for the production and health of the Okavango Delta. The delegation will visit and discuss the reserve's floodplains, woodlands, and open savannah, which have specific wildlife and management hurdles.

19:00 - 20:00

Return to camp and freshen up for dinner

20:00 - 21:30

Dinner briefing on public-private partnerships for protected areas

Protected areas are widely recognized as the "anchors" to any effort to preserve and regenerate nature and restore ecosystems for the benefit of wildlife, human well-being, and Africa's economies. Yet, most African countries lack the funding and capacity necessary to effectively manage protected areas.

Parks and protected areas that are effectively managed share a common theme – they are managed under a collaborative management partnership model, where the government agency responsible for managing the protected area has delegated certain management responsibilities to a partner which assumes those management responsibilities and in most cases funding obligations.

Accommodations: Tuludi Camp, Khwai Private Reserve

Wednesday, April 24th

- 07:00 - 09:30 Field visit and breakfast briefing on human-wildlife conflict and community development
- Human-wildlife conflict is a serious obstacle to wildlife conservation worldwide and is becoming more prevalent as human populations increase, development expands, and other human and environmental factors put people and wildlife in greater direct competition for a shrinking resource base. The delegation will learn about cost-effective solutions to mitigating these conflicts, as well as ways in which conservation benefits humans living in proximity to parks and protected areas. The delegation will learn about conflict flashpoints, as well as cost-effective solutions to mitigating these conflicts. They will also learn about how this conflict impacts human communities and why this matters to the U.S.*
- Khwai Private Reserve is an innovative community-based joint venture partnership in the Okavango Delta ecosystem and World Heritage Site. The Khwai Private Reserve was established to create a meaningful bridge between the tourism industry and local people. With support of Reserve staff and community members, the briefing will discuss community benefits and programs.*
- 09:30 - 11:00 Return to camp and check out
- 11:00 - 11:30 Transfer to airstrip
- 11:30 - 12:30 Heli-transfer to Tawana Camp, Moremi Game Reserve, briefing en route with aerial survey of the Okavango Delta to observe riverine woodlands, rivers, and lagoons and identify wildlife migration routes.
- The Okavango Delta system is a designated Ramsar site of international importance, jointly managed through the Okavango Delta Management Plan and the Permanent Okavango River Basin Commission (OKACOM), a tripartite agreement between Botswana, Namibia and Angola to promote the sustainable management and conservation of the entire water basin.*
- 12:30 - 13:00 Check in at Tawana Camp
- 13:00 - 14:30 Lunch briefing on transboundary conservation and the successes and challenges of the Kavango-Zambezi Transfrontier Conservation Area
- ICCF staff will brief the delegation on management of migratory wildlife across international borders, including existing efforts and needed actions. Discussions will also focus on improved management of shared ecosystems. Wildlife that migrate through ecosystems spanning more than* one country pose unique challenges. For example, poachers often cross into neighboring countries to conduct their illicit activities then escape back across the border, with the knowledge that rangers are prohibited from crossing national borders to track and arrest them. Guests will learn about a range of transboundary wildlife challenges and ways that governments can work together to address these challenges.

The KAZA TFCA is enormous, larger than Germany and Austria combined and nearly twice as large as the United Kingdom. It lies in the Kavango and Zambezi River basins where Angola, Botswana, Namibia, Zambia, and Zimbabwe converge.

It includes the 15,000 km² Okavango Delta, the world's largest inland delta, as well as Victoria Falls, a World Heritage Site and one of the seven natural wonders of the world.

The KAZA TFCA process evolved from two initiatives: the Okavango Upper Zambezi International Tourism Initiative (OUZIT) and the "Four Corners" Transboundary Natural Resource Management Initiative. However, unlike its predecessors, the KAZA TFCA initiative is owned and led by the governments of the five partner countries, with a clear focus on conservation as the primary form of land use and tourism being a by-product thereof.

*The goal of the KAZA TFCA is "to sustainably manage the Kavango Zambezi ecosystem, its heritage and cultural resources based on best conservation and tourism models for the socio-economic wellbeing of the communities and other stakeholders in and around the eco-region through harmonization of policies, strategies and practices."
Its vision is to establish a world-class transfrontier conservation and tourism destination area in the Okavango and Zambezi River Basin regions of Angola, Botswana, Namibia, Zambia, and Zimbabwe within the context of sustainable development.*

14:30 - 16:00

Afternoon Break. No activities are planned at this time and members of the delegation will have an opportunity to rest before evening activities.

16:00 - 18:00

Briefing in the field on the African poaching crisis and its implications for people and communities

The world is dealing with an unprecedented spike in illegal wildlife trade, threatening to overturn decades of conservation and development gains. As both populations and economies have grown in East Asia, the demand for wildlife products has surged, sending the black-market price of ivory, rhino horn, and other products to historic highs. The recent rise in wildlife product prices has been met by the increased involvement of more organized, better funded, and better armed criminal and terrorist networks, and even militias, compounding the challenges faced by those charged with protecting the wildlife. Wildlife products can easily be converted into cash and used to purchase weapons and fund violent campaigns, and have become a substantial source of income for terrorist organizations in Africa.

Ivory and rhino horn are gaining popularity as a source of income for some of Africa's most notorious armed groups. Illegal wildlife products are a substantial lifeline to African-based terrorism. These groups, which are systematically exploiting porous borders and weak governance and hindering sustainable economic activities, have the potential to set back African development by decades and create large swaths of ungovernable land and new hotbeds for terrorist cells.

Poaching in Africa is destabilizing economies, decimating iconic species, financing terrorist and violent organizations, contributing to the deterioration of governance in rangelands, and creating large swaths of land in which terrorist groups and militants can train and operate. The delegation will learn about recent legislative and policy successes in the region, as well as long-term strategies being developed to ensure availability of natural resources to communities and people now and for generations to come.

19:00 - 20:30

Dinner briefing with Natural Selection representative (TBC) on the role of tourism, Indigenous People, and local communities in conservation management plans

Wildlife tourism in Botswana has a significant impact on the economy and is widely considered a model for countries developing their tourism industries. Colin will speak to the importance of the tourism industry to the conservation of Africa's wild places.

Representative will also speak to the group about the history of the Moremi Game Reserve, designated as such to preserve Indigenous rights on the land, and the importance of respecting the needs and rights of Indigenous People and local communities in conservation management.

Thursday, April 25th

07:00 - 10:00

Field visit and breakfast briefing on wildlife migration and implications for human and animal health

In northern Botswana's Ngamiland District, where the elephant population continues to grow by at least 5% per year, thousands of elephants are increasingly bottled-up between villages and vast livestock disease control fences that prevent them from moving through nearby Namibia into Angola and Zambia. Decreasing pressure on Ngamiland's elephants is crucial to reducing the human-elephant conflict that is unfortunately continuing to grow in intensity. Six wildlife dispersal areas, or habitat corridors, have been identified as critical to securing a long-term future for KAZA's iconic wilderness and species. However, the most important of these corridors, including those that connect Ngamiland to other key parts of KAZA, remain compromised by fences, many of which were put in place decades ago to control animal disease but no longer necessarily serve their original purpose.

10:00 - 12:00 Return to camp and rest before lunch

12:00 - 13:30 Lunch briefing on global biodiversity and habitat loss, land use change, and environmental migration

Biodiversity loss is accelerating at an unprecedented rate, nearly 75% of land surface and over 85% of wetlands have been altered or lost, and more than one million species may be in danger of extinction this century, creating grave threats to human health, well-being, food security, regional stability, and continued economic success. Predicted changes in the ecosystem in Southern Africa are likely to see the drying of wetlands, and increasing competition for water in the south and west impacting dryland cropping and the associated livelihoods. Rainfall projections indicate that the southern part of the KAZA TFCA will generally be drier than the northern parts, significantly impacting biodiversity and the communities dependent on the landscape, with herbivores migrating northwards in search of pasture and water, followed by the carnivores that feed on them, increasing demand for resources.

According to the Intergovernmental Science-Policy Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services (IPBES), desertification affects 45% of Africa's land area, with 55% of this area at high or very high risk of further degradation. Land degradation includes soil erosion, salinization, pollution, nutrient depletion, and loss of soil fertility, and is often driven by agricultural expansion, deforestation and biodiversity loss, increasing human and livestock populations, and unsustainable use. Africa is the most vulnerable continent to the impacts of these changes, subject to increasing frequency and severity of natural disasters, unpredictable rainfall, and widespread crop failure. An estimated 36 million people across Africa are displaced, mostly from conflict. This number has tripled since 2011, representing 44% of the global total.

13:30 - 16:00 Afternoon Break. No activities are planned at this time and members of the delegation will have an opportunity to rest before evening activities.

16:00 - 18:00 Field visit and briefing on nature-based solutions

Humans depend heavily on the services provided by natural ecosystems, including forests, coral reefs, mangroves, coastal wetlands, grasslands, rivers, lakes, and oceans. Ecosystems provide food and materials and are inherently resilient and stable, making them an effective tool for urban/residential planning. Additionally, nature provides opportunities to retain the carbon stored in biomass, in both terrestrial and marine ecosystems. The retention of carbon stored in natural ecosystems not only reduces the CO² concentrations in the atmosphere but also provides the necessary stability for the sustainable use of natural resources. These interventions using natural systems are collectively known as nature-based solutions (NbS).

Nature-based solutions are actions to protect, sustainably manage, or restore natural or modified ecosystems to address societal challenges, simultaneously providing benefits for people and the environment. Outside of climate mitigation and ecosystem advantages, there are notable social and economic benefits from these solutions, including job creation, tourism and community development, improved water quality, food security, and other health benefits. Examples of nature-based solutions include restorative agriculture practices such as crop rotation, restoring wetland or mangrove habitat, rebuilding coastal dunes, incorporating green areas in city/residential planning, sustainable management of intact forests, and reforestation of degraded forest land.

18:00 - 19:00 Return to camp and freshen up for dinner

19:00 - 20:30 Dinner briefing on conservation finance, international cooperation, and linkages to the global economy, peace, and stability

ICCF staff will lead a discussion to tie together information learned on the trip and more closely examine linkages to broader global issues. This will include a discussion of various development mechanisms available to finance global conservation efforts and how these efforts can work in tandem. Discussions will further contrast broader strategies for development finance: those that use predatory debt financing for infrastructure projects with detrimental environmental impacts to those that, rather, with sustainable outcomes, can uplift local economies in the developing world.
