BREAKFAST ADDRESS AND EMERGING ISSUE #1:

THE IMPENDING THREAT TO THE FREEDOM OF SPEECH:

In the US, college campuses are often the battlegrounds for debates on social issues. These battles coined new terms such as 'hate speech' and 'offensive speech', and many students and professors alike call for legislation outlawing both forms of language. Democracies in parts of Europe have already enacted legislation outlawing certain types of speech. What effect does this have on a free society? How can we best understand threats to America's most sacred principles of free speech, political liberty, and freedom of the mind?

EMERGING ISSUE #2:

ENERGY AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Most Americans want low cost energy, while maintaining a healthy environment. However, people take energy for granted without any appreciation for the work it takes to produce this resource. Now 'protecting' the environment has become synonymous with the 'climate change' debate, ignoring how these two facets interact with market forces.

LUNCHEON AND KEYNOTE ADDRESS

CONGRESS SHALL HAVE THE POWER: LAWMAKERS AND THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution recently turned 231 years old. Upon reading it, Thomas Jefferson called it "unquestionably the wisest Constitution ever yet presented to men." It remains, to this day, the oldest written national constitution in continuous use in the world. But, can it still be said to be the wisest of all constitutions? And can its wisdom only be gleaned by judges and legal experts, rather than Members of Congress? David Azerrad will discuss how lawmakers should understand their constitutional role in a federated republic, and what their oath to uphold the Constitution mean.

CYBERSECURITY

Almost everything in our society revolves around a digital platform. However, with our major technological advances come vulnerabilities that place the security of our nation at risk. How are we to address internet privacy verses information sharing in our country? What role do tech companies in the private sector play in shaping our cybersecurity and national security policies?

GLOBAL THREATS

In the current global geopolitical landscape, many nations or entities threaten the safety of American citizens and US's interests in multifarious ways. Some of the United States' greatest threats have changed or dissolved within the past two years, while others have remained consistent or even intensified. Old rivals and potential peer competitors make national security an ever more complex but necessary concern.

MEDIA BLITZ: MESSAGING ON DIFFICULT ISSUES

WORKING WITH THE WHITE HOUSE

The Constitution dictates that the Legislative and Executive Branches have inherently different roles; however, as is evident throughout history, the interests of each branch often overlap or even clash.
