Mr. Justin Wein
Office of the Honorable David Price
2108 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Wein:

Pursuant to House Rule 25, clause 5(d)(2), the Committee on Ethics hereby approves your proposed trip to China,1 scheduled for November 2 to 8, 2019, sponsored by Aspen Institute, Inc. and Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, with financial support from Rockefeller Brothers Fund, Democracy Fund, and Henry Luce Foundation.

You must complete an Employee Post-Travel Disclosure Form (which your employing Member must also sign) and file it, together with a Sponsor Post-Travel Disclosure Form completed by the trip sponsor, with the Clerk of the House within 15 days after your return from travel. As part of that filing, you are also required to attach a copy of this letter and both the Traveler and Primary Trip Sponsor Forms (including attachments) you previously submitted to the Committee in seeking pre-approval for this trip. If you are required to file an annual Financial Disclosure Statement, you must also report all travel expenses totaling more than $390 from a single source on the “Travel” schedule of your annual Financial Disclosure Statement covering this calendar year. Finally, Travel Regulation § 404(d) also requires you to keep a copy of all request forms and supporting information provided to the Committee for three subsequent Congresses from the date of travel.

Because the trip may involve meetings with foreign government representatives, we note that House employees may accept, under the Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act (FGDA), gifts “of minimal value [currently $390] tendered as a souvenir or mark of courtesy” by a foreign government. Any tangible gifts valued in excess of minimal value received from a foreign government must, within 60 days of acceptance, be disclosed on a Form for Disclosing Gifts from Foreign Governments and either turned over to the Clerk of the House, or, with the written approval of the Committee, retained for official use.

1 Please be aware that the Committee’s review of the proposed trip does not extend to either the security situation in the destination country or security related to foreign travel in general. We recommend you contact the Sergeant at Arms (SAA) for a safety and security briefing prior to your departure. SAA may be reached at (202) 226-2044 or ohstaff@mail.house.gov. House travelers should also register for the U.S. State Department’s Smart Traveler Enrollment Program at https://step.state.gov.
If you have any further questions, please contact the Committee’s Office of Advice and Education at extension 5-7103.

Sincerely,

Theodore E. Deutch

Appendix

4. Provide names and titles of all House Members and employees you are inviting. For each House invitee, provide an explanation of why the individual was invited.

Below are the Congressional staff members invited to participate in the conference. The staff members invited either have direct committee jurisdiction and/or a focus on the conference topic.

1. Maria Bowie, Deputy Chief of Staff, Rep. Tom Cole
2. Jackie Cahan, Counsel, House Committee on Foreign Affairs
3. Alan Feyerherm, Legislative Director, Rep. Jeff Fortenberry
4. Walter Gonzales, Legislative Director and Deputy Chief of Staff, Rep. Dutch Ruppersberger
7. Josh Rogen, Chief of Staff, Rep. Ted Deutch
8. Amy Surber, Deputy Chief of Staff, Rep. Jim Banks
10. Jennifer Hendrixson White, Professional Staff Member, House Committee on Foreign Affairs
11. Chad Yelinski, Legislative Director, Rep. Mark Meadows

Question 12: For each sponsor required to submit a sponsor form, describe the sponsor’s interest in the subject matter of the trip and its role in organizing and/or conducting the trip.

The non-grant-making sponsor Carnegie Endowment provided financial support and helped organize the event. Carnegie Endowment is a public charity whose mission is to advance international peace by leveraging its global network to provide decision makers with independent insights and innovative ideas on the most consequential global threats and opportunities.

The grant-making sponsors (also listed in 3C) Rockefeller Brothers Fund foundation, Democracy Fund foundation and Henry Luce foundation financially supported the project but play no role in organizing and conducting the conference. These grant-making sponsors have an interest in education of federal legislators.

Given the missions of both Aspen Institute Congressional Program and Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, this Beijing conference, designed for senior congressional staff members to have an in-depth analysis on US policy regarding China, including drawing on Chinese and American experts residing in China, is directly related to the missions of both organizations.

September 13, 2019

Dear Justin:

We are pleased to invite you to participate in congressional staff initiative, U.S.-China Relations: A New Era, hosted by the Aspen Institute Congressional Program in collaboration with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The initiative features a lunch briefing on September 17th, a reception October 24th with prominent foreign policy experts, and concludes with a conference in Beijing, China, November 2-8, 2019 (including travel). Please see the following documents for the conference agenda and an informational one-pager.

This invitation is non-transferrable – invitees have been hand-selected from a pool of qualified, experienced staff with the intent of creating thoughtful bipartisan dialogue on U.S.-China relations. Pre-conference events as well as lodging, travel, and conference costs will be paid by the Aspen Institute and Carnegie Endowment, as approved by House and Senate ethics committees.

If you are interested, please respond to this invitation as soon as possible, and our team will follow up with further details and instructions. Should you have any questions, please reach out to Lauren Kennedy at lauren.kennedy@aspeninstitute.org, or Douglas Farrar at Douglas.Farrar@ceip.org.

Sincerely,

Susan Walsh

November 2-8, 2019 Beijing, China Conference For Senior Congressional Staff

SATURDAY, November 2:
1:50 pm: Participants depart Washington, D.C. on United Airlines flight 807

SUNDAY, November 3:
3:40 pm: Participants arrive in Beijing
6:30–8:30 pm: Working Dinner
Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and congressional staff members are rotated daily. Scholars Robert Daly, Director of the Kissinger Institute at the Wilson Center, and Paul Haenle, Director of the Carnegie/Tsinghua Center, will add to the discussions which will serve as an orientation session.

MONDAY, November 4:
8-9:30 am: Working Breakfast
SETTING THE STAGE
China’s rise to a major economic and strategic player on the global stage over the last three decades has been a phenomenal story that now positions it as a major competitor to the U.S. The future direction of this dynamic relationship is the focus of our programming this week. Directors Haenle and Daly will each give their views and perspectives of the week ahead.

Robert Daly, Director, Kissinger Institute, Wilson Center
Paul Haenle, Director, Carnegie/Tsinghua Center

9:30-11:30 am: Educational Commentary in transit to the Great Wall of China
WHY CHINA BUILT THE GREAT WALL, AND WHAT IT MEANS ABOUT CHINA’S FOREIGN POLICY AND SENSE OF NATIONHOOD TODAY
Construction of the Great Wall of China was started as far back as the 7th century B.C., but the best-preserved sections were built during the Ming Dynasty, (1368-1644). It is an engineering wonder, wandering up hills and along ridges, intended to divide China from foreign invaders. Directors Haenle and Daly will elaborate on the rationale for the wall, its effectiveness, and what it symbolizes about the concept of nationhood and Chinese identity that connects to contemporary China.

Robert Daly, Director, Kissinger Institute, Wilson Center
Paul Haenle, Director, Carnegie/Tsinghua Center
11:30-1:30 pm: Site Visit to The Great Wall at Jiankou

This visit to the Great Wall will illustrate what a mammoth engineering feat was undertaken to construct it along high mountain ridges for the goal of holding back invaders. The Jiankou section, 50 miles north of Beijing, believed to have been built in the Ming Dynasty, has not been restored and shows how the Wall has deteriorated over time. This visit has relevance to contemporary discussions regarding isolationism and security in foreign policy.

1:30-2:30 pm: Working Lunch

Scholars Robert Daly and Paul Haenle will focus on the impact of the Great Wall and policy implications and other issues to be addressed during the conference. Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas.

2:30-4:30 pm: Transit back to hotel

5:30-7:00 pm: Pre-Dinner Dialogue

INSIGHTS FROM YOUNG BILINGUAL CHINESE

This session is designed to give senior congressional staff an opportunity to get to know several young, dynamic Chinese and to hear their perspectives about what it takes to operate successfully in China’s political and economic structure. These individuals have achieved considerable success in the private sector and are at a point in their careers where they are looking toward the broader role they might take on in their communities or globally.

Anna Brachtendorf, Program Manager, Friedrich-Ebert Foundation
Kevin Kerrigan, Strategic Risk and Media Affairs Consultant
Thena Lee, Senior Manager for Marketing Operations, McLarty Associates
Jun Mai, Beijing Correspondent, South China Morning Post

7-9 pm: Working Dinner

Scholars Paul Haenle and Robert Daly to continue the discussions, as well as the four Chinese individuals from the pre-dinner dialogue. Congressional staff are seated with scholars and the seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and congressional staff members are rotated daily.

TUESDAY, November 5:

8:15-9:15 am: Transit to School of International Studies, Peking University

9:30-11:30 am: Roundtable Discussion

THE U.S.-CHINA BILATERAL RELATIONSHIP:
THE SECURITY DIMENSIONS
Ongoing military and security concerns exist in the western Pacific, exacerbated by China's island reclamation project in the South China Sea. Regional relationships, including with American ally Japan, play a key role in these considerations. The U.S. relationship with Taiwan has always been a point of contention with China, which sees it as a province destined to eventually return to the mainland's jurisdiction. Hong Kong's fate, accentuated by televised demonstrations this summer, highlights the tension inherent in the "one country, two systems" formula. China has taken steps perceived as increasing an arms race with the U.S. Beijing and Washington collaborate on stability on the Korean peninsula, antiterrorism and nonproliferation. However, suspicion and a lack of trust underlies the security dimension of U.S.-China relations. Cybersecurity has emerged as another realm of vulnerability.

- As China grows in global stature, is it fulfilling its role as a "responsible stakeholder" in addressing shared global challenges?
- How does China's pursuit of its regional and global aspirations fit with America's goals?
- What is the consequence of the U.S. labelling China a strategic competitor?
- What is the nature of the changing relationship between China and Russia and its relevance to the U.S.?
- How long can the status quo in Hong Kong and Taiwan prevail? What tools does the U.S. have to impact those situations? How does the administration's proposed $8 billion arms sale to Taiwan fit into regional security concerns?
- To what degree are human rights concerns in China relevant to the U.S.?
- Are there areas where China and the U.S. can cooperate, such as in combatting terrorism and addressing policy challenges in the Middle East?

CHINA’S ENERGY/ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY CHALLENGES AND THEIR RELEVANCE FOR U.S. POLICY

China and the U.S. are the two largest emitters of carbon. China gets two-thirds of its electricity from burning coal and uses more coal than the rest of the world combined, with just over half of global consumption. Coal burning for home heating in northern China reportedly takes an average of five years off a person’s life, and over 1.2 million Chinese die prematurely annually from air pollution. China has massively expanded its use of renewables, with more than twice as much capacity as any other nation—solar and wind energy now providing 15% of the country’s electricity. China is also expected to increase its consumption of natural gas to offset coal production and become a major importer of liquefied natural gas, which could provide a huge opportunity for a new U.S. export commodity. In an effort to lessen its coal dependency, China plans to nearly double its nuclear energy capacity with 11 new plants under construction, mostly utilizing American technology and suppliers, with a goal of nuclear energy providing 20 percent of its electrical needs by 2030. Meanwhile, China’s global thirst for energy, water, metals, food products, and strategic minerals to support the rising living standards of its population of 1.4 billion—one-fifth of the world—positions it as a resource competitor globally. To reduce fossil fuel dependence and lessen pollutants, China is now the world’s largest market for electric vehicles.

- How severe are China’s environmental challenges and what are their global implications?
- Should energy and environmental challenges be integrated with security and economic concerns?
- Are international or multilateral agreements necessary to force reductions of carbon emissions?
- Does China’s “Cap and Trade” system on carbon emissions have relevance for the U.S.?
- How does China’s appetite for resources impact its development strategy in Africa?
- What is the future food security profile for China and its global impact?

OFF-THE-RECORD
WITH AMERICAN JOURNALISTS BASED IN BEIJING
Western journalists resident in China have gained unique perspectives on security, economic and environmental challenges in the U.S.-China relationship. This off-the-record session is designed to facilitate a back-and-forth dialogue to provide an opportunity for senior congressional staff to benefit from the perspectives of journalists who understand many of the complex nuances of these policy challenges.

6:45-8:15 pm: Working dinner
Discussion will continue over dinner and focus on topics covered in discussions earlier today, enhanced by the participation of scholars Robert Daly, Paul Haenle and the participating journalists. Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and congressional staff members are rotated daily.

THE U.S.-CHINA BILATERAL RELATIONSHIP:
THE ECONOMIC DIMENSIONS

China and the U.S. together account for nearly 35 percent of global Gross Domestic Product. Economic interdependence has been the underlying stable framework of U.S.-China relations, with China dependent on exports to the U.S. and the U.S. reliant on China's purchase of its debt. China is the largest foreign debt holder for the U.S., at $1.1 trillion. This economic foundation of engagement between countries with fundamentally different political systems has been a stabilizing force, albeit one with some uneasiness. After 40 years of engagement in which economics served, in China’s President Xi Jinping’s phrase, as the “ballast” of the relationship, American dissatisfaction with China’s trade and investment policies ignited a comprehensive competition. Protectionist strategies put in place with escalating tariffs from both sides have contributed to an atmosphere of a “trade war” between China and the U.S. The administration imposed these tariffs in response to what was perceived to be China’s unfair practices of requiring U.S. firms to form joint ventures, to share U.S. technology, to be subject to intellectual property theft, and having to compete against often hidden state subsidies. Assuming that the costs of tariffs are passed on to consumers, it is estimated the financial impact of these tariffs will range from $500 to $1,000 annually for the average American household. China is unwilling to restructure its economy to meet American demands, however, and it is learning to leverage its wealth to build influence worldwide and within the U.S.

- Are there links between U.S.-China economic engagement and security issues?
- What are China’s prospects for continued economic growth and why does it matter to the U.S.?
- Does China’s increasing wealth carry commensurate global responsibilities?
- Is the Belt & Road Initiative, China’s global expansion plan, simply a program for “predatory lending,” or is China providing global public goods and rewriting rules that may be accepted?
- Last summer, for the first time in 25 years, the U.S. categorized China as a currency manipulator. What is the significance of this move?
- To what degree does each country’s development depend on economic engagement with the other?
- How will the continued growth of China’s middle class change China, and why does it matter to the U.S.?
- What are the prospects for China’s currency to become convertible and what would the global economic consequences be?
- Which of China’s trade and investment policies pose the greatest threat to the U.S., and what are the chances of altering them?

2-4:00 pm Tiananmen Square, Temple of Heaven and other historic landmarks
This will provide an opportunity to see Tiananmen Square, a focal point for the central government and the site of the 1989 demonstrations that led to violent suppression. Tiananmen is now a symbol of the aspirations of Chinese youth 30 years ago for a more open society which were crushed by the ruling Communist Party. It will also provide the opportunity to see other historic landmarks including the Temple of Heaven. These important reference points add texture and a visual reference point to the policy conversations this week.

THE U.S., CHINA, NORTH KOREA TRIANGLE
Security concerns of the U.S. and its allies about North Korea and its nuclear threat have a direct connection to China, which is its major supporter and lifeline. Experts from the Carnegie/Tsinghua Center will provide analysis of the historical relationship between China and North Korea and the relevance of this relationship to U.S. concerns about its nuclear threat. Sanctions and bilateral

12:30-2 pm:  Luncheon Remarks
ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE AND ITS ROLE IN U.S.-CHINA RELATIONS Artificial Intelligence is a new dimension in the U.S.-China relationship. Some see it as a realm of global competition. Others see it as a natural development of a new industry that will have wide-ranging implications for both countries.
China is far outspending the U.S. in AI research, and some think it will dominate the field. AI can be used at a mundane level to replace tedious tasks and at a more sophisticated level to quickly manage complex production systems, enhance military applications, and empower governments to exert more control over the governed. AI requires vast amounts of data to operate predictably and efficiently, and how that data is obtained triggers privacy and security concerns.
The scale and scope of projects underway is quite impressive. For example, sixty miles south of Beijing, China is planning to spend billions of dollars building a new city called Xiong'an, specifically designed for autonomous transportation, which is highly dependent on AI. One noted Chinese AI entrepreneur predicts that "within fifteen years, artificial intelligence will be able to replace around 40 to 50 percent of jobs in the United States." Our speakers will elaborate on the advancements in this new frontier and discuss the implications for future U.S.-China relations.

- Is China still an imitative nation, or has it developed the ability to innovate at American scale?
- Is the American regulatory environment necessary to guarantee consumer protections regarding AI, or a drag on the growth of this emerging industry that would put the U.S. at a competitive disadvantage versus China?
- Which nation is likely to prevail in AI advance, and what are the global implications of dominance in the field?

Brian Tse, Senior Advisor, Center for the Governance of AI, University of Oxford
Dan Wang, Technology Analyst, GaveKal Group, Beijing

2-4:30 pm: Forbidden City Visit
The Forbidden City was the central repository of rule by the Ming and Qing dynasties for centuries until upheavals of the 20th Century. It is now a showpiece to instill pride in China’s culture and tradition. This visit will help provide an understanding of China’s historical continuity as a power in Asia. This visit will also provide insight into China’s self-image as one of a great power on a historical trajectory of grandeur – which is reflected in its domestic policies and international relations.

5:45-7 pm: Pre-Dinner Discussion
CHINA’S NEW MIDDLE CLASS AND CIVIL SOCIETY:
THE IMPACT ON THE SOCIAL CONTRACT AND GOVERNANCE
In the last 40 years, with China’s economic opening to the world, China’s middle class has grown from a sliver to an estimated 420 million people, roughly one-third of its population. This lifting of hundreds of millions out of poverty has increased standards of living and life expectancy, created a consumer class and added new dimensions of political and demographic factors to Chinese society. During this same time period, China’s urban population has soared from 19 percent in 1980 to 58 percent in 2017. A majority of the middle class has internet access, which has contributed to China’s massive e-commerce market. Increased consumption has added to environmental stresses and more sedentary lifestyles have led to higher health care costs. We will hear perspectives from two Beijing residents on the rise of China’s middle class and its impact on modern Chinese society, with broader implications for the U.S.-China relationship.

Elizabeth Knup, China Director, The Ford Foundation

9:30-10 am: Transit to Yale University Center

10-11:30 am: Panel Discussion

PERSPECTIVES FROM U.S. UNIVERSITIES OPERATING IN CHINA
Many top U.S. universities maintain a presence in China, and many American universities have Chinese students, most who pay full tuition. It is estimated that 360,000 Chinese students study in the U.S. (paying tuition estimated to be $12 billion annually) and 12,000 Americans study in China. Representatives of U.S. academic institutions will elaborate on their operations in China, what challenges they face, and how they see their role as a factor, if at all, in the greater U.S.-China relationship.

- Have student visas become an issue?
- Are exchange programs still strong?
- How dependent are U.S. universities on foreign students’ tuition?
- Are there particular challenges for U.S. universities to operate in China?
- Are the university operations subject to or immune from trends in the relationship?
