Discussion – Chips, China, and the New Frontier of Industrial Policy

The CHIPS Act heralds a new era in industrial policy. Real national security concerns and human rights abuses necessitate reducing China-dependent supply chains. Yet, beneficiaries of protectionist policies may use such reasoning to further their own goals, even if unrelated to national interests. While a wealth of historical experience in industrial policy exists, current dialogues seem to overlook past lessons. For example, discussions about the CHIPS Act rarely mention Sematech, which, while not a perfect analog to the CHIPS Act, was also intended to promote domestic chip design and manufacturing. This panel aims to untangle these multifaceted issues.

TPI Aspen Forum 2023 – August 20-22, 2023

The TPI Aspen Forum, in its 14th year, is an important venue for policy education for academics, industry representatives, government officials, congressional staff, and media and press. In plenary panels and working groups by Chatham House rule, attendees are able to ask questions and discuss complex and changing policy considerations on a breadth of topics from antitrust, innovation, global competitiveness, spectrum, supply chain, content moderation, digital assets, and economic growth. The discussions in the summer are forward-looking to fall and winter policy agendas, where attendees can learn from each other to be better informed about economic conditions in the U.S. and abroad. The panels are accredited for continuing legal education with supplemental reading materials for attorneys. Our opening keynote speaker has traditionally been an academic economist, sharing remarks on economic conditions to set the tone for the proceeding discussions.

We extended invitations to US House Congressional staff who work on telecom and tech policy matters, including digital asset policy, content moderation, antitrust, telecom, and spectrum policy. We focused on inviting staff from the House Energy and Commerce Committee, and House Judiciary Committee.
