4:00-5:15 pm

Short-term pollutants

The focus in mitigation discussions is often focused on CO₂, but there are shorter term greenhouse gases, like methane, that present significant global warming impacts. Additionally, there are gases, like hydrogen, that are projected to play much bigger roles as energy carriers in the future that have poorly understood potential impacts on warming. The goal of this session is to inform staffers about the key technical issues in reducing the emissions of the pollutants and removing them from the atmosphere.

Short-term pollutants

The focus in mitigation discussions is often focused on CO₂, but there are shorter term greenhouse gases, like methane, that present significant global warming impacts. Additionally, there are gases, like hydrogen, that are projected to play much bigger roles as energy carriers in the future that have poorly understood potential impacts on warming. The goal of this session is to inform staffers about the key technical issues in reducing the emissions of the pollutants and removing them from the atmosphere.
