Introduction to the program with presenters setting the stage for what is to be covered during the event. Participants will learn about why wildfire is a growing safety, economic and public health issue – in directly affected regions as well as thousands of miles away - and receive an overview of each session as well as presenters.

1:30-2:30 Climate and Weather:
Noah Diffenbaugh, Senior Fellow, Stanford Woods Institute for the Environment
Park Williams, Professor, UCLA

This session will broadly address climate, weather and the role these factors play in preventing, predicting and mitigating wildfires. Participants will learn about our changing climate and how weather conditions such as winds, temperature and humidity can adversely or positively affect fire behavior.

2:30-3:30 Wildfire and Human Impacts
Marshall Burke, Associate Professor, Stanford Doerr School of Sustainability
Michael Wara, Director of the Climate and Energy Policy Program, Stanford Woods Institute for the Gabrielle Wong Parodi, Assistant Professor, the Stanford Doerr School of Sustainability

Participants will hear from experts on the human health effects resulting from wildfire exposures. This includes measurable public health outcomes such as increased emergency room visits, aggravated respiratory issues and cardiovascular incidents as well as immediate and longer-term social and mental health effects to communities and individuals.

3:30 Break

4:00-5:00 Forest Health
Chris Field, Director, Stanford Woods Institute for the Environment
Malcolm North, Associate Professor Forest Ecology, UC Davis

A healthy forest is better able to withstand and resist damage from extreme wildfires. This session will focus on forest health indicators, covering topics such as drought effects on vegetation, invasive species and destructive pests, and the role of biodiversity in ecosystems.

5:00-5:30 Networking reception with speakers and attendees

5:30-7:00 Dinner

7:00 Return to hotel

Wednesday, August 14 – at Stanford

8:15-9:00 Hotel pick up and breakfast

9:00-10:00 Fire Management and Prescribed Burn:
Crystal Kolden, Associate Professor, Management of Complex Systems,
UC Merced
Lenya Quinn Davidson, Fire Advisor and the Fire Network Director, University of California Agriculture and Natural Resources (UCANR)

Fire science experts will provide a background history on forest/wildfire management along with current scientific knowledge related to best practices. They will focus on prescribed burns as a management tool to create healthy forests that are more resilient to extreme wildfire events and which recover more quickly when burned.

10:00-11:00 Tribal Resource Management and Cultural Burning:
Tony Marks-Block, Assistant Professor, Department of Anthropology, Geography, and Environmental Studies at California State University
Don Hankins, Professor of Geography and Planning, California State University, Chico

Indigenous tribes practiced what is known as prescribed or selective burning for millennia to manage forests and landscapes, ensuring that sufficient resources were available to sustain both livelihoods and cultural activities. This practice was outlawed with the passage of the 1850 Act for the Government and Protection of Indians. Tribal and TEK experts will discuss the resurgence of cultural burning as part of Tribal landback and sovereignty efforts as well as the now widely acknowledged acceptance of the practice as a key wildfire mitigation strategy.

11:00-11:30 Break

11:30-12:30 Other Approaches to Fire Reduction:

Fire resource managers will share current best practices to reduce the incidence of wildland fires along with some of the alternative strategies now being deployed. New technologies for fire prediction as well as landscape treatment will also be discussed.

12:30-1:30 Lunch

1:30-2:30 Wildfire Workforce
Kelly Martin, International Association of Wildland Fire

The most critical component of wildfire fighting is the human workforce: wildland firefighters who are on the ground engaged in combatting fires as well as those who develop strategies and direct their efforts. Participants will learn what is being done to recruit and retain these invaluable frontline workers and improve their labor conditions including economic benefits, training and career opportunities, and physical and mental health care.

2:30-3:30 Community Mitigation:
Sara McCaffrey, Retired Forest Service
Kim Guiliacci, Division Chief / Fire Marshal / Fire Investigator, Woodside Fire Protection District

To prevent fire devastation to humans and property, the best defense is a good offense, particularly in communities which are identified at high fire risk. These communities can engage in group actions to better prepare and prevent a fire-borne disaster such as clearing vegetation to create defensible space, undertaking home hardening projects, educating residents and developing evacuation plans. This session will focus on community-based efforts to improve fire safety and discuss how similar programs can be more widely adopted.

3:30-4:00 Break

4:00-5:00 Insurance:

Nancy Watkins, Principal and consulting actuary, Milliman
Penny Liao, Fellow, Resources for the Future

As climate change related disasters like wildfires increase and cause billions of dollars in property damages, insurers are pulling coverage for homeowners and businesses where their losses are significant. California offers a 'plan of last resort' for individuals or entities who aren't eligible for traditional coverage, but even that system is failing. Insurance experts will discuss the state of the industry and potential pathways to provide consumers with insurance coverage options that are equitable and affordable.
