8:45 AM MT	Travel from the Hampton Inn to Idaho National Labs
9:00 AM MT	Idaho National Laboratory Tour Welcome and Overview

Idaho National Laboratory (INL) is one of 17 national labs in the U.S. Department of Energy complex, with more than 6,400 researchers and support staff focused on innovations in nuclear research, integrated energy systems, and security solutions that are changing the world. INL's capabilities involve testing advanced nuclear energy concepts, preparing radioisotope power sources for NASA space exploration, developing longer-lived electric vehicle batteries, protecting the power grid and collaborating with numerous industries to turn waste into fuel. INL operates the world's premier materials test reactor, the Advanced Test Reactor, which is one of only two reactors in the nation producing life-saving medical radioisotopes. Touring INL relates to CSF's mission of bringing together bipartisan congressional staff to learn more about climate and energy science, which will better inform their legislative work.

10:00 AM MT	Tour of Experimental Breeder Reactor 1 (EBR-1)

EBR-1 is a decommissioned research reactor and U.S. National Historic Landmark. EBR-1 is the world's first breeder reactor. A breeder reactor is a nuclear reactor that generates more fissile material than it consumes. In 1951, it became one of the world's first electricity-generating nuclear power plants when it produced sufficient electricity to illuminate four 200-watt light bulbs. EBR-1 is now a museum.

11:00 AM MT Tour of Advanced Test Reactor (ATR)

The ATR is the world's premier nuclear test reactor. It provides unmatched, national priority nuclear fuel and materials testing capabilities for military, federal, university and industry partners and customers. INL's nuclear research capabilities rely heavily on ATR, located at the ATR Complex on the INL Site. As the national laboratory for the U.S. Department of Energy's Office of Nuclear Energy (DOE-NE), INL serves a key role in U.S. nuclear energy research initiatives and programs, such as the National Reactor Innovation Center.

12:30 PM MT Lunch Discussion on the Materials and Fuels Complex (MFC)

The MFC hosts the core of U.S. nuclear energy research and development capability with an array of facilities designed for remote work on highly irradiated fuels and materials. A new fuel idea can be designed and fabricated, then tested and analyzed at MFC to better understand the effects of irradiation. Many groups, such as universities, industry partners, other national laboratories, international research organizations and other federal agencies are currently working at MFC. MFC houses 29 mission facilities. This lunch discussion will give attendees the opportunity to converse with MFC researchers and staff.

1:30 PM MT Tour of MFC

1:50 PM MT Tour of the Hot Fuel Examination Facility (HFEF)

The HFEF is INL's flagship facility for conducting post-irradiation examinations (PIE) of fuels and materials. HFEF, located at the Materials and Fuels Complex, is a national research asset with the largest inert atmosphere hot cell dedicated to nuclear materials research in the U.S. HFEF provides the ability to remotely handle and perform detailed nondestructive and destructive examination of highly irradiated fuel and material samples. Its argon-atmosphere hot cell, labs and special equipment handle a variety of fuel forms, including tiny particles, four-foot research reactor plates and full-sized commercial rods. HFEF supports INL's mission of research and development of safer and more efficient fuel designs.

2:30 PM MT Tour of Space Battery Museum

INL's Space Nuclear Power and Isotope Technologies Division assembles and tests Radioisotope Power Systems at INL's Materials and Fuels Complex, then delivers the systems for use in remote, harsh environments such as space. Radioisotope power systems can heat and power autonomous machinery for extended operation periods. INL assembles such generators by adding the radioactive power source.

3:30 PM MT Tour the Transient Reactor Test (TREAT) Facility

The TREAT Facility operated from 1959 through 1994, when it was placed in standby mode. A resurgence of interest in developing innovative nuclear technologies has driven demand for transient testing. TREAT was restarted in 2017 and is currently supporting experiment programs. TREAT provides transient testing of nuclear fuels and materials. The facility is used to study fuel melting behavior, interactions between fuel and coolant, and the potential for propagation of failure to adjacent fuel pins under conditions ranging from mild upsets to severe accidents.

4:30 PM MT Travel from INL to the Hampton Inn

4:45 PM MT Down Time

6:30 PM MT Dinner Discussion on the Impact of INL on the Local Economy & Electric Utilities
Sandpiper Restaurant

In keeping with our mission of bringing together ideologically diverse congressional staff, elected leaders, and corporate executives to discuss climate science, economics, and policy, we will host a dinner on the impact of INL on the local economy and electric utilities. This meeting will provide a collaborative environment to discuss a bipartisan path forward on nuclear energy policy.

Integrated Energy Systems Overview

Through research and demonstration, INL advances integrated energy generation, storage and delivery technologies. The integrated systems approach is a marked change from traditional energy system designs typically focused on single generation sources to support a single energy demand (e.g., a nuclear plant that provides electricity to meet grid demand). INL is leveraging its expertise in nuclear and renewable energy systems to lead the world in developing integrated, clean, multigeneration energy systems that incorporate both heat and power for grid services and industrial processes. This clean heat and power can efficiently and economically produce clean hydrogen, and when combined with biogenic carbon, a broad spectrum of chemical commodities and low-emission fuels. By innovating to harness electricity, heat and hydrogen, INL accelerates a clean energy-based economy while enhancing grid reliability, resilience and affordability.

9:00 AM MT

Scientific Computing and AI Overview

Artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning (ML) are helping INL scientists pursue advances in engineering and energy research. Computers that mimic cognitive functions and apply complex algorithms to analyze data can help researchers solve a variety of technical issues. This new approach aids in everything from materials design for advanced reactors to making nuclear power plant control rooms more usable and efficient. Attendees will learn about INL's five goals that support their research missions and how they are using AI to support those initiatives.

9:45 AM MT

Tour of the Collaborative Computing Center (C3)

C3 is the hub for modeling and simulation at INL. The Department of Energy's mission relies firmly on computing capabilities in various forms. In recent years, high-performance computing (HPC) has become increasingly important in scientific research, and its use in research has expanded across diverse disciplines.

10:20 AM MT

Tour the Energy Systems Laboratory (ESL)

The Energy Systems Laboratory (ESL) supports multiple projects. ESL engages in bio energy research through the Biomass Feedstock National User Facility (BFNUF), which is currently the R&D technical leader for developing bioenergy feedstock supply systems. The Electric Vehicle Infrastructure Laboratory enables collaborations with industry to test charging systems and help establish benchmarks for future technology. At the microgrid test bed, INL experts test dynamic storage and load-balancing options and perform simulations using real world data and hardware.

Climate Solutions Foundation

Question # 12

CSF was founded in 2019 as an educational, bipartisan 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Our mission is to bring together ideologically diverse Members of Congress and their staff, global leaders, and corporate and trade executives to discuss climate science, economics, and policy. The Climate Solutions Foundation hosts a series of bipartisan, bicameral gatherings of members of Congress, congressional staff, executives, and scientists to build trust within the climate change community and inspire collaborative efforts to advance the agenda on climate change. Since then, CSF has expanded its programming to include domestic educational trips, international trips to the UN's (COP) convenings, congressional staff briefings, receptions, and a congressional fellowship program. The Climate Solutions Foundation is solely responsible for organizing and planning all aspects of the trip.

Question # 15-2

We will be visiting the Idaho National Laboratory (INL) to engage directly with leading experts and gain a deeper understanding of INL's critical role in advancing the United States' nuclear energy capabilities. This visit will provide valuable insights into how INL supports the development of safe, clean, and reliable nuclear power, contributes to innovations in clean water technologies, and operates the Advanced Test Reactor (ATR)—a unique facility that plays a pivotal role in nuclear research, materials testing, and the future of advanced energy systems.
