12. AEPC is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to advancing energy literacy through nonpartisan education. Its interest in the trip's subject matter is to provide congressional staff with a firsthand understanding of oil and natural gas development, including the technologies, infrastructure, workforce, environmental practices, land-management considerations and community impacts associated with energy production in the region. AEPC is responsible for developing the educational program and itinerary, inviting and coordinating participants, arranging and paying for transportation, lodging and meals, coordinating site access and speakers, preparing educational materials and overseeing the trip's administration and compliance.

PureWest Energy is a co-sponsor of the trip and an operator in the Pinedale area. Its interest in the subject matter is to provide participants with firsthand, technical information about oil and natural gas development in the region, including drilling and production operations, infrastructure, environmental practices, water management, reclamation, land-use considerations and community engagement. PureWest is assisting with the development and conduct of the educational program by coordinating access to its operating sites, identifying appropriate subject-matter experts and site personnel, providing required safety briefings and personal protective equipment, and leading portions of the site visits and technical discussions.

15b (2). Pinedale, Wyoming, was selected because it provides direct access to active oil and natural gas operations, related infrastructure, and land-management and conservation initiatives that are central to the trip's educational purpose. The location allows participants to observe these activities firsthand and hear directly from operators, technical experts, land managers, government officials, and community stakeholders whose work and perspectives are specific to the region. This includes, as applicable, representatives from federal and state land and wildlife agencies, such as the Bureau of Land Management, as well as local officials and community leaders who can provide context on the region's energy development, public lands, conservation priorities, and local economic impacts.
