CELEBRATING 60 YEARS
NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON U.S.-CHINA RELATIONS

NCUSCR U.S.-China Relations Congressional Staff Fellowship Capstone Conference

September 18-19, 2026
Airlie Conference Center, Warrenton, VA

MISSION GOAL: The goal of this offsite conference, entirely underwritten and programmed by the 501(c)(3) National Committee on U.S.-China Relations, is to immerse Congressional staffers ("Fellows") in an intensive set of briefings on U.S.-China relations — the most consequential bilateral relationship shaping U.S. national security, economic, trade, and technology policy. At the same time, the conference's casual setting will provide and encourage candid, off-the-record exchange, and ample opportunities for the Fellows to engage formally and informally with some of the field's top thinkers.

Through structured briefings and a tabletop exercise focused on Chinese domestic politics, U.S.-China technology competition, Taiwan and national security strategy, and Chinese industrial policy, the program will strengthen the Fellows' ability to analyze policy tradeoffs and better inform legislative and oversight work related to China policy.

RELEVANCE TO FELLOWS' OFFICIAL DUTIES: Congressional staff play a central role in shaping the ways Congress formulates U.S.-China policy, whether by advising Members in personal offices or supporting committees of jurisdiction. Fellows attending this program will return to their core job functions – briefing Members ahead of China-related votes and hearings, drafting and analyzing China-related legislation, and conducting oversight on issues including export controls, defense policy, Taiwan, and foreign investment review – with additional knowledge and relationships that directly strengthen their capacity to perform their jobs.

LOCATION: The program will be held at Airlie, a conference center in Warrenton, Virginia, approximately an hour from Washington, D.C. We chose this out-of-town location deliberately: to remove participants from the day-to-day pace of the Hill; to create the sustained, uninterrupted time needed for in-depth briefings and a tabletop exercise; and to foster the kind of informal interactions among and between staffers, briefers, and program staff that shorter, in-town sessions rarely develop.

Upcoming Trump-Xi Summit – A Fireside Chat with Sarah Beran

Description: Xi's visit to the White House, his first since President Barack Obama received him there in September 2015, is expected to build upon the Trump-Xi summit in May 2026 in Beijing, where both sides agreed to "constructive strategic stability" as the defining principle of the relationship, a framework for managed competition rather than confrontation.

This briefing will unpack what U.S. experts anticipate when President Donald Trump hosts President Xi Jinping for a state visit on September 24, 2026, and equip staffers to assess the summit's successes. Following the moderated discussion, Fellows will have ample time for Q&A with the two experts.

Relevance to Fellows' official duties: This briefing provides Fellows with a grounded, expert assessment of an imminent U.S.-China summit, answering their specific questions, and equipping them to assess the summit's outcomes and advise their principals on bilateral diplomacy.

Sarah Beran, Incoming President, National Committee on U.S.-China Relations (NCUSCR); former Deputy Chief of Mission, U.S. Embassy Beijing; former Senior Director for China and Taiwan Affairs, White House National Security Council.

Robert Daly, Visiting Professor of the Practice and Founding Director of the Program on China and the United States, School of Public Policy, University of Maryland; NCUSCR Board Director (moderator)

- Overview of bilateral relationship dynamics and current perceptions in Beijing and Washington
- Progress/contention since last summit
- Unpacking "Constructive Strategic Stability"
- Points of leverage and structural sticking points
- Importance of U.S.-China-Taiwan relations

Taiwan Embargo Tabletop Exercise, Led by Mark Christopher

Description: Fellows are introduced to a fictitious scenario which begins with China circulating a bureaucratic customs notice in early 2028 asserting that all shipping companies arriving in and embarking from Taiwan must clear China Customs. Divided into country/territory teams potentially affected by these actions — tentatively set as the United States, Taiwan, Japan, South Korea, North Korea, Russia, and the Philippines, with China roleplayed by NCUSCR staff and/or its invited subject matter experts – Fellows roleplay as their respective government's leadership, deciding how to respond.

We anticipate having time for each country to make three moves (one per hour) in response to China's action and the responses/actions of other countries. A fourth round, in which the China team describes what China's next move would plausibly be, based on how the Fellows' teams left things at the end of round three, will be announced to close the tabletop exercise.

Explicitly not a Pentagon-style force-on-force modeling exercise, the exercise is built around a deliberately small-scale premise, meant to illustrate a realistic (non-invasion) risk to Taiwan. It is designed to surface the sometimes hard tradeoffs – deterrence vs. escalation, alliance coordination vs. unilateral action – that any change in the status quo ante might force onto decision-makers in days, not months.

Relevance to Fellows' official duties: The exercise builds staff familiarity with and knowledge about the Taiwan issue and China's potential to employ gray-zone strategies with respect to Taiwan; the policy and military options open to the U.S. and its allies in a Taiwan crisis; and the geopolitical interdependencies and complexities of the region, directly supporting the Fellows' offices' work on defense authorization, foreign affairs, and crisis-response legislation.

Mark Christopher, co-author, America's Taiwan Dilemma, and President, MC Global Risk Consulting

Country Team Advisors:

Sarah Beran, incoming President, NCUSCR

Robert Daly, Founding Director of the Program on China and the United States, School of Public Policy, University of Maryland

Isaac Kardon, former Senior Fellow, Asia Program, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

Kendra Schaefer, Director of Tech Policy Research, Trivium China

12:00pm-12:15pm

Break and move into lunch

12:15-1:15pm

Working Lunch with Tabletop Debrief: What did the group learn?
Mark Christopher will lead the discussion.

Relevance to Fellows' official duties: The debrief translates the exercise into concrete policy takeaways, helping staff identify legislative and oversight considerations relevant to their offices' work on Indo-Pacific security. It allows Fellows to work through implications for their own offices and committees, helping them identify follow-up questions and legislative angles tied to their committees' jurisdiction, reinforcing peer learning across the bipartisan cohort.

1:15pm-1:30pm

Break and move back to conference room

1:30-3:45pm

Expert-Led, Round-Robin Discussions

Divided into four groups, Fellows rotate through experts, spending 30 minutes with each. Rather than formal presentations, each expert briefly frames a set of issues before leading an informal discussion, encouraging Fellows to ask questions, challenge assumptions, and explore policy implications.

Discussions will delve into such topics as U.S. export controls, AI policy, and industrial competitiveness, including ways the United States might re-shore high value manufacturing; CFIUS reform, foreign ownership of U.S. farmland and infrastructure, potential national security concerns for the United States, its allies, and trading partners, and related legislation; and China's evolving strategic and economic overseas interests that have contributed to a shifting bilateral relationship.

The goal of the rotating format is to create an engaging, interactive, and distinctive capstone experience that reflects the Fellowship's emphasis on dialogue, critical thinking, and relationship building.

We will take a 15-minute coffee/bathroom break after the first hour.

Relevance to Fellows' official duties: These four mini briefings provide Fellows with opportunities to explore concepts, raise questions, gather info, and identify areas worthy of further research, given their own office's interest in the subject area. The exchanges will help them with their daily tasks, including drafting related bills, advising principals, and conducting oversight of agency implementation. More broadly, the discussions will increase their nuanced understanding of the complexities of the U.S.-China relationship.

Q12. For each sponsor required to submit a sponsor form, describe the sponsor's interest in the subject matter of the trip and its role in organizing and/or conducting the trip:

Having taken the first-ever delegation of Congressional staffers to the PRC in 1976, NCUSCR has a long history of organizing delegation visits and briefing programs for Members of Congress and their staffs. In addition to organizing and accompanying more than 30 MECEA delegations to China for staffers from both chambers, NCUSCR has privately sponsored nine Congressional Member delegations – all to the PRC, with some making extension visits to Hong Kong and/or Taiwan. Our specific goal is to promote informed decision-making among our nation's top policymakers.

Operating as the sole organizer and trip sponsor, NCUSCR has designed a capstone conference to bring our inaugural Congressional staff Fellowship cohort together with a group of subject experts for deeper analysis, peer learning, and relationship-building. Leading up to the capstone, Fellows have already been briefed by a variety of subject matter experts on key issues shaping U.S.-China relations. The 1½-day capstone conference will provide an opportunity to build on those conversations through extended discussions, collaborative problem-solving, and interactive exercises with colleagues from across the House and Senate. NCUSCR will draw on its expertise and extensive network to arrange briefings, exercises, and discussions that elucidate national security, trade and investment, technology, and other issues in the bilateral relationship.
